Brokers and their children
score at Old Trafford

Thirty top-scoring brokers had the chance to score at Manchester United's home football ground in May, when AIG UK hosted an event to reward its best performing brokers.

Each of the brokers – who came from as far afield as Aberdeen, Portsmouth and Northern Ireland – was invited to come to Old Trafford and bring one of their children to share the experience (see accompanying photo).

During the weekend event, the group received individual football skills training from Manchester United Soccer School coaches, before being allowed to imagine themselves in the team's shoes – using the players' changing rooms before running out on the pitch to the sound of 70,000 fans on the loudspeakers. They then played five-a-side tournaments on the ground's hallowed turf and took part in a soccer skills challenge. They were also treated to dinner in the Manchester United museum, as well as meeting former United favourites Pat Crerand and Lou Macari and getting the chance to be photographed with the Barclays Premier League trophy.

The group was hosted by Lex Baugh, Kelly Lyles and Tom Doherty of AIG UK's Executive Management team and Patrick Cloughley and Stephen Ball, both Sales Managers for the Corporate Accounts Practice.
